

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. ## ROSTER FOR 1886.

This list includes 150 officers commissioned in the Corps, nearly 300 acting signal officers, and some 1900 enlisted men.

The number before the name in the list of regular officers indicates the lineal rank. The statement in parenthesis designates the rank at the time of transfer, and the organization from which the officer was transferred.

Clergymen are indicated by the abbreviation Rev. following the P. O. address, Physicians by Dr., and Lawyers by Esq.

The names of members of the Signal Corps Association are printed in CAPITALS.

All of whose decease information has been received, are marked with an * before the name.

Important facts omitted from this record are earnestly desired by the Historian, that future Rosters may be as full and as accurate as possible.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

The Historian of the Association in presenting the recollections of Capt. B. R. Wood and Private A. H. Cook, desires to say that these two papers were selected not because they were better than many others received, but because they seemed quite as well adapted as any to his present purpose, and because their use would interfere less with his own future work than the publication of other equally good narratives. They are presented as examples of the sort of help desired. It is the personal element which, after the lapse of a quarter of a century, we shall find it most difficult to obtain. The writers have consented to the publication of their records though modestly preferring that others should be selected for the purpose.

The Historian has been obliged to modify somewhat the plan which he outlined in the Roster of 1884. What he desires for the coming year and a few of the following years is, such assistance, financial and historical, as will enable him to carry out the plan suggested below. By financial assistance is meant simply a large increase in the membership of our Association and the prompt payment of annual dues. By historical assistance you may understand that you, whether a member of our Association or not, are requested, nay, urged to furnish such truthful, interesting, and carefully prepared memoranda as you may be able, even at some personal sacrifice, to bring to the light and put on record. It should be added in this connection that no officer of the Association receives any compensation whatever for services rendered. All money received is devoted to the payment of actual expenses, chiefly those incurred in correspondence and printing.

A ready response to the foregoing suggestions would enable us to carry out the following plan, subject, of course, to the approval of the Association :—

In 1887, the publication of a sketch of the origin and formation of the Corps, with the story of its development and achievements in 1862.

In 1888, the story of its re-organization as a distinct branch of the regular army and an account of its labors for 1863.

In 1889, the history of the Corps for 1864 and 1865.

This plan, faithfully adhered to, would enable us to publish in 1890, if deemed advisable, a carefully revised "History of the Signal Corps during the War." This would be a fitting commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the muster-out of the Corps.

Will you respond to our 14223 with a prompt 23114.

J. WILLARD BROWN.

WEST MEDFORD, MASS., July 21, 1886.

Personal Memoranda of Service in the Signal Corps.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC,

WASHINGTON, March 16, 1862.

Lieuts. Ludwick, Felt, and Wood, Acting Signal Officers, with six enlisted men, will proceed without delay to the Headquarters of the Department of the Mississippi and report to Maj. Gen. Halleck for duty.

ALBERT J. MYER, Sig. Off. Maj., U.S.A.

A True Copy:

SAM'L T. CUSHING, 1st Lieut. 2d Infantry, Act'g. Sig. Off.

Approved:

By Command of GEN. MCCLELLAN.

S. WILLIAMS, A. A. G.

Capt. Ludwick informs me that in obedience to the above order the following officers and enlisted men left Washington, March 23, 1862, and reported to Gen. Halleck at St. Louis, on or about the first day of April:—Lieut. J. B. Ludwick, 9th Pa. Res., with flagmen John Westlake, 9th Pa. Res., and Jeremiah S. Young, 6th Pa. Res., Lieut. Geo. H. Felt, 55th N. Y. Vols., with William L. Vorhis, 8th Pa. Cav., and Andrew J. Speese, 3d Pa. Cav., and Lieut. B. R. Wood, Jr., 44th N. Y. Vols., with James H. Kelly and Isaac T. Lawless of the same regiment.

The fate of Vorhis and Lawless is noted in Capt. Wood's paper. Turning to my own memoranda I find that in March, 1863, Capt. Charles L. Davis, Chf. Sig. Off., Dept. of Va. and N. C., had sent me for temporary duty to the station at Gloucester Point, on the York river. I there met Col. L. W. Smith, 169th Pa. Vols., who informed me that Westlake had tired of the Signal Corps, had rejoined his regiment without orders a day or two before the battle of Fredericksburg, and had fallen in that battle. Westlake was very popular with us "boys" in the camp at Georgetown and on our first march out to Manassas. He was a good singer and we remember with pleasure learning from him the afterward familiar song, "Shells of Ocean."

From a long and very interesting record of the year 1862 by Sergt. J. H. Kelly, the following selection is given as a suitable introduction to the sketch furnished by Capt. Wood.

J. W. B.

"The writer on reporting at Signal Camp, was assigned quarters in Sergt. Evan Russell's section, in a Sibley tent with comrades Ben. D. Alexander, C. W. C. Rhoades, Tom McKean, Fayette McClure, Sam Page, George W. Smith, Will. Brown, Dick Hewett, and Nick Bogart, which latter name should have 'Smith' as an appendix. [Vide Roster.]

"A very congenial mess we made, especially when occupied with a kettle of baked beans prepared by Comrade Alexander, a la Boston, or arguing some social or theological question, or framing a campaign for McClellan, that would, if carried out, result in great advantage to the country and cover us all with glory. I remember well some very pleasant hours spent with yourself and others in singing the songs of the camp, and in making social calls, which tended to pass the time and soften down the hardships of camp life. As to duty,—why its very novelty made it a pleasure,—and, harring our too frequent tricks on guard, which we all voted a matter of unnecessary discipline, the weeks passed quickly and we all became very efficient ‘signal men’ by March 1st and anxious for a detail. I do not know who was responsible for it, but the impression that we were to do signal duty with our respective regiments was very general among the men.

“Monday, Mar. 10th, the details came and what an exciting time it was! It thrills me even now to think of it! But how the ardor of your correspondent was cooled to learn that he was assigned to the reserve squad under Lieut. Cushing,—a very efficient and most excellent officer to be sure,—plenty of room in camp, lots of condemned horses and mules to look after, a whole ten-acre lot to police, &c., &c. And still I must confess a madder or more dissatisfied lot of luckless volunteers could not be found in the army of the Potomac, or rather out of it, for we could see battalions, regiments, and batteries without end marching over Long Bridge and down to the front, but in the course of army events our turn came at last.”

ALBANY, N. Y., April 14, 1885.

Mr. J. WILLARD BROWN,

Dear Sir :

Mr. James H. Kelly of this city, who was a Sergt. in the Signal Corps during the war, and who for nearly two years served with me, has recently sent me a pamphlet of the U. S. Veteran Signal Corps Association, with a partial roster of the Corps, and requested me to give you such information of the service of the Corps as I could during my connection with it. A history of the Signal Corps would, I think, not only be very interesting but well received, and I trust you will have no difficulty in obtaining the facts and incidents necessary for its completion. While the Corps was composed of some of the best officers and men in the volunteer service, who were as faithful to duty as men could be, by being placed on detached service, it seems to me, they were often deprived of honor and promotion which they would have received if they had remained with their regiments, where in some instances they might have been of more service to their country. As my official papers and baggage were captured and burned by the rebel cavalry at La Vergne, Tenn., in December, 1862, I regret that I cannot give you more definite information, but you are welcome to use what follows as you may think best.

The writer was one of the three officers sent from the camp of instruction at Georgetown, D. C., in March, 1862, under the command of Lieut. J. B. Ludwick, to report to Gen. Halleck at St. Louis, Mo., for the purpose of organizing and instructing a signal corps for the army under his command. The larger portion of his force being then at Pittsburg Landing, Tenn., under Gen. Grant, we were directed by Gen. Halleck to report to him, which we did on the 6th day of April, during the battle at that place. Gen. Grant was then too much occupied to give us much attention, but we made earnest efforts to open communication with Gen. Buel, and when Gen. Nelson came up in the afternoon and his signal officers established a station on the bank of the Tennessee river, we rendered them some assistance.

Soon after the battle a camp of instruction was formed at Paducah, Ky., where the details from various regiments were received. As soon as officers and men were sufficiently instructed in their new duties, the writer with Lieuts. George N. Gray, James T. Caldwell, and Albert Verhoeff, with eight flagmen, were ordered to report to the fleet on the Mississippi river. The detachment joined the fleet at Memphis, June 6th, the day of its capture, and reported to Com. Davis then in command. An expedition consisting of four gunboats, the Mound City and St. Louis (iron-clad), the Conestoga and Lexington (wooden), and the transports White Cloud, New National and Musselman, with supplies and the 46th Ind. Vols., under the command of Col. G. N. Fitch, was soon after fitted out for the purpose of communicating with the army under Gen. S. R. Curtis, then supposed to be near Jacksonport, Ark., at the head of navigation on the White river. The writer with Lieuts. Gray and Caldwell was directed to proceed with them. Lieut. Verhoeff was left at Memphis and afterwards went down the Mississippi to Vicksburg, where one of his men, Richard Starkey, died of yellow fever. The expedition up the White river, Ark., met with no opposition until it reached the village of St. Charles, where a gunboat which had escaped from the rebel fleet at Memphis, and two transports had been sunk across the channel of the river, and earthworks had been thrown up on the bluff on the west bank and mounted with some heavy guns taken from the gunboat, while a light battery of field pieces had been planted nearer the water.

Previous to the engagement at this place, which occurred June 17, 1862, the infantry under Col. Fitch had been landed on the west bank of the river, which was covered with woods, the transports at the same time taking position on the east side. The gunboats then proceeded up the river to begin the attack, the Mound City being in advance. Lieut. Caldwell was stationed with the transports, Lieut. Gray accompanied the infantry, and the writer took his station on the Mound City. As soon as the latter came within range the rebels opened on her from the heavy guns on the bluff, which were well concealed by the intervening trees and shrubbery, the Mound City replying with her bow guns as soon as she could see the smoke from the enemy's guns. In rounding a slight bend of the river the Mound City was struck by a solid shot on the port side near the bow where there was no iron armor, which, after piercing her side and killing two or three men, penetrated the boilers, causing the steam to escape and scalding nearly the whole crew. Many jumped out of the port-holes into the river to avoid the steam, some being drowned and others shot, while a few succeeded in reaching the shore or were picked up by the small boats from the other gunboats. Some of the rebels came down to the brink of the river to fire at our men swimming in the water, while their batteries continued to pour in grape and canister. Col. Fitch now requested the gunboats to cease firing, while he assaulted the rebel works from the rear with his infantry. He took them by surprise, capturing nine guns and thirty prisoners, including Col. Frye, the commanding officer. While some of our men were swimming in the water a very gallant act was performed by a little tugboat accompanying the expedition, carrying a small brass howitzer, with a crew of only two men. She rushed to the rescue while the Mound City was drifting helplessly down stream, and at short range fired two or three charges of canister into the rebels along the bank.

Of a crew consisting of one hundred and eighty men on the Mound City hardly thirty escaped death, many of the scalded lingering one or two days in great agony. The Signal Corps lost an excellent man in this fight in the person of Isaac Lawless, who was so badly scalded that he died soon after on the gunboat Conestoga on his way to the hospital at Memphis. He was wrapped in his blanket by his comrade J. H. Kelly, and laid to rest with twenty-six of the crew of the Mound City on the east bank of the Mississippi river, a little above Island No. 68. Of fine physique, he was an excellent soldier, of a pure and noble character, and died in the hope of a happy eternity. He had but recently heard of the death of a brother, who was killed at Hanover Court House, Va., and had a presentiment that he would meet his death in this engagement. Our soldiers were very indignant at the conduct of the rebels in this fight, and threats were freely made to hang Col. Frye, but as he claimed that he could not control his men, and had been an old schoolmate of some of the officers with the fleet, he was more kindly treated. In contrast to their conduct, while some of the rebel gunboats were sinking in the naval battle before Memphis, Com. Davis ceased firing and sent his small boats to pick up the enemy who were struggling in the water. After rendering useless the guns and works of the enemy, and removing the obstructions from the channel of the river, the expedition proceeded on its mission up stream.

An amusing incident occurred in the cabin of the White Cloud soon after starting. While Col. Fitch and the officers who were stationed on the boat, and several civilians, including some sutlers and speculators who accompanied the fleet, were dining pleasantly together, suddenly thirty or forty shots were fired in close proximity. All present thought we were attacked by guerillas, and in a moment the table was deserted except by three officers who determined to finish their dinner. The alarm turned out to be a false one, the shots having been fired by our own men from the hurricane deck, who thought they saw some armed men in the woods on shore; but it was a long time before all the civilians could be found, some having crawled under the table, while others had hidden in the wheelhouse, or in the state-rooms, where they were found protecting themselves with the mattresses, and during the rest of the journey their behavior and conversation was greatly improved. The boats were afterwards fired into at different points, and a few men were killed and wounded.

The gunboats ascended the river as far as it was considered prudent on account of the falling water, the ironclads being of much deeper draught than the others, and then we returned to the mouth of the White river. Here being reinforced by five transports, containing the 34th and 43d Indiana Volunteers, we again ascended the river with the wooden gunboats in advance, the ironclads returning to Memphis. We ascended as far as Aberdeen, Ark., where a part of the infantry were sent out to reconnoitre, meeting about four hundred rebel cavalry, whom they routed with a loss of ten killed and twenty-five wounded, our loss being one killed and five wounded. We heard nothing of Gen. Curtis, and as some of the boats had already run aground, the expedition returned to the Mississippi, which we ascended as far as Helena, Ark., where Gen. Curtis had already arrived, having crossed the White river some distance above the point reached by the gunboats.

Soon after the Signal party accompanied Gen. Curtis with his escort and three companies of infantry on two transports down the Mississippi below Napoleon, Ark., destroying all ferryboats which could be found, in order to prevent the enemy from crossing the river, and returned to Helena with many refugees who wished to go North. One man who would not surrender and attempted to escape from his ferryboat was killed.

While at Helena an order was received from Gen. Halleck disbanding the Signal Corps in his department, and directing the three officers who came from the East to report to Gen. Grant at Memphis, Tenn. After remaining here a short time and at Columbus, Ky., the writer was ordered to report to Gen. Wright at Cincinnati, O., and on doing so was assigned to the Signal detachment at his headquarters under the command of Lieut. H. R. Clum. On the 1st of October, 1862, this detachment was transferred to Gen. Gilbert, commanding the 20th Army Corps, then near Louisville, Ky. The writer was attached to the staff of Gen. R. B. Mitchell, commanding a division in that corps, acting as aid during the battle of Perryville, and at other times during the campaign. At Lancaster, where we had a skirmish with the enemy, some signaling was done on the field, but during the pursuit of Gen. Bragg through Kentucky, and the return march to Nashville, Tenn., the signal officers were so scattered, and the troops so constantly in motion, not many messages were sent by flag.

An incident occurred while approaching Nashville which relieved the monotony at our headquarters for a time, and which brought a great improvement to our bill of fare. Gen. Mitchell having received a leave of absence on account of sickness, was succeeded by Gen. Woodruff. One afternoon when the troops had been halted for the day, Gen. Woodruff and his staff took a short ride beyond the lines, and made a call at a farm house where they found a charming widow, who made herself very agreeable, and invited the General to make his headquarters at her house; but having already selected a place for his headquarters, and given orders for the tents to be pitched he politely declined. She then urged him to take tea with her and spend the evening, but having been recently taken prisoner in West Virginia the General had become somewhat cautious and politely declined the second invitation also. The next morning we were awakened by a lively skirmish close by, and a regiment of infantry being hurried forward soon came upon a sutler's wagon heavily loaded with supplies, from which the horses had been taken, and the sutler and driver carried off prisoners. It seems the sutler was in a great hurry to reach his regiment, which was several miles distant from our division, and thinking the roads secure had been allowed to pass through our lines before daybreak. Had Gen. Woodruff accepted the widow's kind invitation he would, in all probability, have been again taken prisoner. The recaptured wagon was brought to headquarters, and an inventory taken of its contents, but whether the captured sutler ever received compensation for his goods is doubtful; at any rate the fresh vegetables, fruits, cakes, etc., were not wasted, and were a great improvement on hard tack and pork.

We soon after arrived at Nashville, where our party was attached to the headquarters of Gen. A. McD. McCook, who had succeeded Gen. Gilbert in the command of the 20th Corps. While the army remained at Nashville signal stations were established, connecting the headquarters of Gens Rosecrans, McCook, Crittenden, Rousseau, and others. When the army commenced its forward movement the writer was ordered to report to Gen. Stanley commanding the cavalry, which had some severe skirmishes with the enemy, but returned to Gen. McCook's headquarters the day before the battle of Murfreesboro. As the battle began by a furious attack on the right of the 20th Corps, driving it back through a dense growth of cedars, there was not much opportunity for signaling on the first day. During the remainder of the battle a few messages were sent from different parts of the field. It was during this battle that we heard of the loss of our wagon containing some of our signal equipments, camp equipage, baggage, and official papers. It was captured and burned with many others belonging to the 20th Corps, by the enemy's cavalry. We lost everything except what we had on our persons and on our horses, and as winter had now commenced this loss was severely felt. It was not pleasant to wake up in the rain and build a fire in order to dry ourselves, and a new supply of cooking utensils and a mess kit were not easily procured. When, however, the army went into winter quarters after the battle, our detachment was permitted to occupy part of a deserted mansion where Gen. McCook had established his headquarters, and where we soon made ourselves at home. One of the rooms assigned to us had previously been occupied by a Southern belle, who, in her hasty flight to Georgia, left behind many souvenirs which are no doubt remembered by her loyal but unbidden guests.

Stations of observation were now established, connecting the outposts and various headquarters, and maintained during the winter and spring of 1863. We were all glad when marching orders came again, and we were once more on the march to find Gen. Bragg, who was said to be strongly fortified at Tullahoma. Preparations were made for a battle at that place, but on approaching the rebel fortifications, they were found to be deserted, and we were not sorry, for they looked very formidable and difficult to carry by assault. From Tullahoma we marched to Winchester where we made a short halt. Here an excellent station was made on top of the Mary Sharpe College, by lowering one side of the cupola for a platform, connecting Gen. McCook with Gen. Thomas about nine miles distant in one direction, and with Gen. Sheridan about fifteen miles distant in another, in the Cumberland mountains. Gen. Bragg having now retreated south across the Tennessee river, our army followed close in pursuit, the 20th Corps crossing with slight opposition at Stevenson and Bellefonte, Ala. Signal stations were at once established in the mountains, from one flank of the army to the other, connecting Stevenson with Bellefonte, Bridgeport, Jasper, Dunlap, and (with the help of the signal telegraph for five miles) with our troops before Chattanooga, a line over seventy miles long.

From our station opposite Stevenson, we could communicate with stations fifteen miles distant on either side, and many long messages from Gen. Rosecrans were sent along this line. The army now had to wait a short time for supplies, which came slowly over long lines of transportation, frequently disturbed by the enemy. As soon as these had been provided, the 20th Corps once more took up the line of march, over mountains and through valleys, extending to the neighborhood of Alpine, Ga. Here the enemy was found to be in strong force and ready to turn upon us. A station of observation on a high mountain overlooking Broomtown valley, near Alpine, Ga., was able to give Gen. McCook some very valuable information of the movements of the enemy, from clouds of dust seen in different directions, more, he said, than his scouts or cavalry had been able to obtain.

We now hastened to join the main body of the army which was attacked by the rebels, Sept. 19th, at Chickamauga. The division of Gen. R. W. Johnson had been hurried forward and participated in the first day's battle at that place, but the balance of the corps did not come up until evening. The next day our troops were all waiting for the battle to commence, when the unfortunate gap in our lines was disclosed on Gen. McCook's left. He immediately gave orders to close this by the left flank, but it was too late, for Gen. Longstreet now came charging out of the woods with overwhelming force, which our men, in their broken condition, could not successfully resist. Our first line checked them for a few moments, but soon gave way. Some of the reserves, which were in close column by division, were immediately brought forward without deploying, but were soon thrown into confusion and driven to the rear. Gen. McCook and his staff made earnest efforts to rally our men, and new lines were formed but they could not stand against the cheering rebels, and the 20th Corps being now cut off from the rest of the army, fell back on Chattanooga. It was most fortunate that Gen. Thomas was able to hold his own against all the assaults of the enemy and to save the day. During the battle private William Voorhis of our detachment was wounded and taken prisoner, and afterwards died in Libby prison.

Signal stations were soon established all along the front, some on houses and some in the tops of trees. Lieut. S. A. Thayer and the writer occupied a station on Moccasin Point, about four miles South from Chattanooga, directly opposite to Lookout Mountain, the Tennessee river running between. We had an excellent view of the earthworks on the North face and Eastern slope of the mountain, some rifle pits in the valley below, and the long lines of entrenchments on Mission Ridge, which could be traced with the telescope from four to six miles distant. As we now had the rebel code of signals we could read some messages which were sent from Gen. Bragg's headquarters on Mission Ridge to the rebel signal station on the summit of Lookout Mountain. One message sent just before the battle of Chattanooga was, — "On whose left did Gen. S—— think the attack will be made?" We had two excellent batteries on Moccasin Point, Capt. Naylor's, Lieut. Crosby being then in command, and Capt. Aylshire's, which, after silencing several of the enemy's guns on the face of the mountain, occasionally exchanged shots with the guns on the summit, but these they were unable to silence. We were afterwards told that one of the shells from Lieut. Crosby's ten-pounder Parrotts had killed a rebel signal officer on top of the mountain. The rebels were not very good marksmen, for though their shells frequently struck near us or went over our heads, making very unpleasant music, they did very little damage on Moccasin Point. Our situation was a very good one for viewing the charge up Lookout Mountain by Gen. Hooker and his command November 24th. It is true that the view was at times obscured by clouds which settled down from the summit over the lines of battle, but this only increased the grandeur of the spectacle. The cloudy weather also compelled us to send some important messages by courier instead of by signal. The batteries on Moccasin Point shelled the enemy wherever they could be seen until requested to cease firing by Gen. Hooker. Towards evening the musketry also ceased, the rebels having retreated up the mountain, but there was frequent and heavy skirmishing during the night, the flashes of the muskets lighting up the side of the mountain, presenting a most brilliant sight to our army about Chattanooga. Under cover of the skirmishing the enemy withdrew, abandoning their guns and camp equipage on the summit of the mountain, which early in the following morning fell into the possession of Gen. Hooker. The capture of Lookout Mountain was bravely accomplished, and gave great encouragement to the rest of our army, which on the following day, November 25th, charged up to the top of Mission Ridge, over strong lines of entrenchments, capturing fifty guns and over six thousand prisoners, completely defeating Gen. Bragg's army, and winning one of the most glorious victories of the war.

Our supplies had been getting very short at Chattanooga, and while on Moccasin Point the signal party lost several horses by starvation. Officers and men were able to live on short rations, but it was impossible to procure sufficient forage for the horses and mules belonging to the army, and the roads about Chattanooga were lined with their dead bodies.

Immediately after the battle an expedition under Gens. Sherman and Granger, accompanied by a transport on the Tennessee river containing ordnance and supplies, was hastened to the relief of Gen. Burnside, then besieged at Knoxville. Lieuts. Burch Foraker, A. F. Berry and the writer were ordered to accompany this expedition, the latter taking position on the boat, while Lieuts. Foraker and Berry marched with the troops on the east side of the river. The steamer running aground on White's shoals, about fifty miles above Chattanooga, was unable to proceed any farther, but the writer being furnished with a team pressed into the service to carry his signal equipments and mess-chest, hurried forward on foot on the west side of the river. Perhaps a poorer team could not have been found in Tennessee, for they were scarcely able to haul the empty wagon up hill, and we frequently had to unload and carry our little baggage up for them. After marching for two days we reached Loudon, where we took the cars for Knoxville. The enemy made a desperate attempt to gain possession of Knoxville before the arrival of reinforcements, filling the ditch of Fort Sanders with their dead in repeated assaults on that unfinished but well defended work, but failing in every attempt, withdrew before the advance troops of Gen. Granger came in sight. Probably at no time during the war were our men on such short rations as at Knoxville, and relief came none too soon. Our country now had great reason to rejoice over the successes of the Army of the Cumberland in East Tennessee.

The writer having while at Chattanooga received notice of his promotion to the rank of Captain, and having requested to be returned to his regiment, the 44th N. Y. Vols., where his presence was earnestly desired, now received an order from Washington to that effect, and bidding farewell to the Signal Corps returned to Virginia, where he completed his term of service with the 5th Corps in the Army of the Potomac.

Very respectfully,

Your obt. servt.,

B. R. WOOD, JR.,

Late Capt. and Bvt. Major, U. S. Vols.

CHAMPLAIN, N. Y. Aug. 4, 1885.

Mr. J. WILLARD BROWN,

Dear Comrade :

I herewith send you my photograph as requested in circular of July 4th. My connection with the Signal Corps began in the fall of 1861 at Poolesville, Md., where Lt. B. N. Miner of Co. D, 34th N. Y. Vols. and myself of same Co. and Regiment were ordered to join the Corps. From there we went to Sugar Loaf Mountain, Md., where we were stationed during the winter of 1861 and 1862, and until the general advance of the army into Virginia in the spring of 1862, when we joined Gen. Banks' division.

We received our "baptism of fire" at the battle of Winchester, March 23, 1862, under Gen. Shields, and rendered good service there, for which we as a Corps were mentioned in general orders, and also received battle flags with "Winchester" inscribed. We followed Gen. Banks through all of the Shenandoah Valley Campaign, including his "famous retreat;" then again at the battle of Cedar Mountain, Aug. 9, 1862, where we were again of great service. After this battle we joined the army of Gen. Pope, and went through the second Bull Run battle and campaign, that ended so disastrously for our army. September, 1862, again found us back in Maryland, whence we had started early in the Spring.

Lieut. Miner and myself were again sent to Sugar Loaf Mountain, Md., on or about Sept. 1. While there we saw the crossing of the Rebel Army into Maryland, at the mouth of the Monocacy River, opposite Leesburg, Va., and the writer of this went to Poolesville, Md., nine miles from the mountain, and telegraphed the fact to Washington, which I afterwards learned was the first official information the government had that the Rebel Army was in Maryland. I returned early the next morning to my post, and as Lieut. Miner and myself were on our way to the top of Sugar Loaf Mountain, we suddenly met in the road two Rebel Cavalrymen, armed to the teeth, while as you know we had simply small revolvers. However we looked back and yelled "come on men, here are the rebels," and at that, they, the rebels turned and ran, and we after them. After a short chase we captured one of them, and he proved to be, on examination, a most important capture, for he was a bearer of despatches from Jefferson Davis to Gen. Robert E. Lee. Here we made a delay that was fatal. But you will understand that we two were all alone, and did not know where a single union soldier was, but knew of course that the rebel army was just in our front and that the soldier who escaped us would carry them the news of the capture of the despatch bearer. My advice to Lieut. Miner was to ride for Washington with our prisoner or to leave him and take the despatches and escape. He decided otherwise, and alas it was a fatal decision, for in ten minutes more, up came a whole brigade of Cavalry led by Gen. Wade Hampton of South Carolina. Of course they captured us and our prisoner. In a moment more Gen. J. E. B. Stuart rode up and cried out, "Are the despatches all right? Are the despatches all right?" On being assured of their safety he turned to us and said, "Good morning, gentlemen, I am very happy to see you." We replied, "Good morning General, we are sorry we cannot return the compliment." He laughed and said, "Oh well, it is the fortune of war you know,"—and giving orders to his men to treat us well, rode off.

We were with Gen. Stuart during the Maryland campaign, witnessing the battle of South Mountain and Antietam from the rebel side. The rebels were beaten badly at Antietam, and their prayer was that McClellan might not renew the battle the next day, which, if he had, would have resulted, in my humble opinion, in either the capture or destruction of Lee's army. The day after the battle we with some 600 other prisoners were started for Richmond, Va., where we arrived after a hard and terrible march more dead than alive. We were confined in Libby Prison until some time in Oct., 1862, when we were released on parole, and sent to Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md. In due time we were exchanged and were back once more doing Signal duty in the camp at Georgetown, D. C., serving till July, 1863, when our term of service expired. I returned to my home in this place, where I have since resided. Lieut. B. N. Miner of whom I have spoken, died some years since.

Pardon this long and perhaps egotistical letter, but I could not tell the story much more briefly. I have a family, a wife and three children (two sons and a daughter), a pleasant home, and if any of my comrades ever come this way, the latch string is outside the door, and we will give them a cordial welcome, and live over our Signal Corps days as we talk of the days of yore.

Yours fraternally,
A. H. COOK.
